

Racism summary

- Racism means the idea of some people being worth more than others, because of their skin color, origin, or religion, which leads to their discrimination.
- Racism is everywhere even where we don't think of it like in an AI-based program.
- Both, direct and indirect racism are hurting people. But the huge problem with indirect racism is, that it's more subtle and difficult to find out which intention the person has. The most popular form of indirect racism are so-called microaggressions.
- Slavery had a huge impact in the history of racism. The enslavement of African people was justified because of a misinterpretation of the theories of Charles Darwin. The National Socialism in Germany also strengthened the racist thinking of some people.
- Everyone can do something against racism. The most important thing is to raise awareness. Not just huge movements like "Black Lives Matter" can lead to change. Also, presentations or websites can help on it.
